

Re: Bienvenidos, amigo!

Re: Bienvenidos, amigo!

Source: <http://newsgroups.derkeiler.com/Archive/Alt/alt.home.repair/2005-11/msg06487.html>

- From: "djvirto" <djvirto@xxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: 30 Nov 2005 01:51:40 -0800
-

Hey Mr Troll, I wonder how Australia gets along without an underclass to take advantage of? People still pick apples and man gas stations, they just get paid more for it.. and guess what? The country is richer on the whole for it. Cheap labor discourages technological innovation, just examine ancient Rome's slave-based economy for an example. I suspect it also heightens a destructive sense that some people are above hard work-- a glimmer of truth in your statements maybe.

I know you're just a troll, and I'm probably stupid to bite.. and this is a home.repair newsgroup.. but there is a tie-in- home inspectors down here in Texas are having a field day finding all sorts of problems with the product of unskilled, illegal-alien powered construction. And at the same time, middle class home buyers are more alienated from building and maintaining their own homes, because they can always hire some poor day laborer (directly or indirectly) to do the work cheap. I'd like to see a return to the owner-builder craftsman trend of 80-100 years ago. Those houses have so much more style and character than your typical plain vanilla modern home it's not even funny.

I know there are lots of exceptions, I'm talking in generalities and 'most of the time's here..

Also, I agree with you, Mr. Troll about telling Bush to fuck off. After all, he's just a macho man who thinks that force can fix all problems best. I say, fuck todos los machos, no matter where they come from.

-p

-
- Prev by Date: Re: Ceramic tile vs. Slate tile
 - Next by Date: A Terrible Thing Happened.....
 - Previous by thread: Water Softener - Result of Not Adding Salt
 - Next by thread: A Terrible Thing Happened.....
 - Index(es):
 - ◆ Date
 - ◆ Thread

Re: Bienvenidos, amigo!