

Re: Online UniVerse documentation

Source: <http://newsgroups.derkeiler.com/Archive/Comp/comp.databases.pick/2006-09/msg00037.html>

- From: "skypirate" <singdad@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: 2 Sep 2006 20:29:10 -0700
-

Bruce,

I have never said that Tony is wrong on the CopyRight issue.

But does it necessary to come to this extreme? "frankly it makes me question whether I'd ever do business with you. " or "pretending that you have no idea what people here are talking about"

Everyone will welcome for all the comments but not the personal attack.

Grigroy may not think about all the consequences b4 he puts up the UV or D3 documenation which he has already shut down the related materials to aviod all the unnecessary troubles.

Tony and Grigory both are my friend, I don't want to see this topic become the battlefield.

Rgds,

Bruce Nichol wrote:

On 2 Sep 2006 19:15:04 -0700, "skypirate" <singdad@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

Tony,

Please cool down. Both parties (you and Grigory) are going too far away from the topic

Re: Online UniVerse documentation

Grigroy is a very simple minded person. When you mentioned about D3REF, he didn't understand why you "messed" it with the topic. I had told him that you only used it as the example.

He only wants to provide some help to the MV marketing (both D3 and UV). He doesn't earn any single cent from this DOCUMENTATION thing so please don't get it wrong.

I really don't think Tony is "getting it wrong".

If the original documentation is copyright or registered in some recognised manner in its "country of origin", then all Grigroy has to do is get the permission of the owners of the copyright/registration to the documentation to use the documentation in a publication or presentation and acknowledge the copyright/registration in that publication or presentation, "public domain" or not.

What is so difficult in that? If the owners of the copyright say "No", then that's another matter.....

It may not be "Common Law" throughout the world – there are national signatories to an understanding and acknowledgement of each country to the copyright laws of other countries, Russia included if I'm not badly mistaken – but it is "Common Decency"

Or doesn't that carry much weight these days?

"Making money" out of it doesn't even enter into the equation. It is respecting peoples' right to ownership.

Regards,

Bruce Nichol
Talon Computer Services
ALBURY NSW Australia

<http://www.taloncs.com.au>

If it ain't broke, fix it until it is....