Why not agree to disagree and remove all the stupid stuff?

Simple. There is no reciprocity. None. AFor peace to reign, it must be two sided.

I think you will find when we get this place cleaned up and quit talking like we were all born in a barn, and treat each other with a little respect, that we all will be able to effectively communicate without the insults in order to get our opinions voiced.

I wish. I have learned that there are those here who never will agree to peace. I have offered peace several times. The last time being unconditional and unilateral.

I will not engage in your battle with Ilena. Your claims are ridiculous about my enabling. The battle is so long and detailed, I did NOT even try to follow what happened. I am assuming the events of writing to wives, happened on a.s.b.i.? I wasn't there at the time. Very few posts between you and she did I try to follow here, as it got very detailed and was impossible to follow.

Having said that, I am well versed in your absolute twisting of stories, making what you do, OK, and the exact same thing others' do a terrible criminal offense. Therefore, I did not believe one single word that comes out of your mouth.

I was NOT involved in any way nor had any knowledge of Ilena writing to anyone.

I hope that you (Jessi), who have been a supporter of hers, will now move and directly ask her to do the same thing. Further, if she ceases her actions towards me, I will render the posts in the Fan Club unreadable. If she removes any and all webpages regarding me and/or my family, the Fan Club will cease to exist.

I sit here lurking day after day and read all this bickering from you and all the others. I read Probert's declaration of peace, and was hopeful that this time at least that war could end. I have not seen him attack you in any of the newsgroups since he declared his peace. Can you show anyone where he has attacked you since his declaration of peace?

If you cannot, then you should rightfully remove the website you made up about his wife. I see her as a casualty of your war.

If you do remove it, it puts him on the spot since he has the next move. He could remove the posts in the fan club he created. If he does not, then it proves that his offer of peace is shallow. Of course, if he does remove the posts, then the next move is in your hands.

Late last year I lost my wife to breast cancer. She was the youngest of six sisters, and the only one to have developed this deadly disease.

Years ago she had silicone breast implants, and, although the medical establishment has stated that there is no connection, I wonder why my wife was the one chosen. No one in her entire family has ever had cancer, let alone breast cancer.

Re: Would it be possible to get out of Grade School?

Re: Would it be possible to get out of Grade School?

I began reading this newsgroup several months ago with the hope that I could find answers to my questions. What I found was a nightmare of mudslinging and hate. I spent time reading the Google archives, and found that this behavior has gone on for years. What a sorry state of affairs this is.

During the weeks and months that I lurked, I began to realize that the mudslinging was the responsibility of just a few people. When Jessi made her request, I had hoped that she would act responsibly and address the mudslinging.

Instead, she ignored any mudslinging by Rosenthal, no matter what was said. Then, LadyLolipop, who I understand is a woman named Jan Drew, popped back into the newsgroup and joined the fray.

Did any of these two women spend a minute questioning Rosenthal's actions? No. Instead, they accept Rosenthal's claims that I am Mark Probert without a moment's hesitation. For them, it is proof enough that Rosenthal said it.

What they have done is to allow a war to continue and thus, render this so-called support group to be useless.

Bye-bye.

C'est la guerre.

www.humanticsfoundation.com/sandraprobert.htm

Dear Rosenthal:

Let us take a moment to review the history of this matter.

YOU initiated this situation when you invaded my privacy by emailing me after my husband warned you not to do so. Your attitude was that you can do whatever you want, and you went ahead and emailed me.

Re: Would it be possible to get out of Grade School?

Re: Would it be possible to get out of Grade School?

When I did not respond as quickly as you liked, you posted the email to a website which you wisely removed. That is extremely childish and controlling behavior, and I would not tolerate it in my presence, or from anyone who I had to deal with. From some of the posts you have made, specifically those where you complain when someone insists on a direct answer, it is clear that you would not tolerate it either.

Thus, it is obvious that YOU, and not me, initiated this situation.

Since those emails, you have continued to accuse my husband of all sorts of horrible things without the slightest proof on your part. For your information, you are absolutely incorrect about his career. We met in college, after he left military service, and I have known him since then.

After college he worked for one of the US Government's agencies where he spent long periods overseas. During many of these periods, he was not able to contact me, nor I him. Our marriage, which has lasted just over 31 years as of this month, is strong, and testifies to the devotion we have toward each other.

In the mid-late 1980's we came to realize that there had to be two full time parents for our two special needs children. Accordingly, Mark left field work, something that he loved, and settled into an office type position with that agency. When an early retirement package was offered, with enhancements for those who had line of duty injuries, like Mark, he took the package and retired.

Fortuitously, Mark then met an old college friend and they formed a company which provides security and investigation services. They have been at it since then. Mark, with his training and experience, is an incredibly effective investigator and security consultant.

Mark's devotion to our family is equaled only by his strong beliefs in protecting our country and individual rights. I have asked him numerous times to complain to GoDaddy, the company that hosts your website, RoadRunner and Hotmail. He refuses to do so, since he is not a hypocrite.

Because of the nature of Mark's former employment, we are circumspect in divulging any personal information that can put our family at risk. For us, the risk is real, as in Mark's work for the US Government, there were "bad people" who use violence to settle matters. Mark made some enemies while working for the government, in countries where they seek revenge for life.

Since you had posted my place of employment, I have been followed from school. Fortunately, Mark trained me on how to shake a tail, amongst other protective measures he has taken.

Additionally, there have been calls to my school from people who refuse to give their names. This has never had this happen before, and YOU have put my family at risk.

Re: Would it be possible to get out of Grade School?

Re: Would it be possible to get out of Grade School?

If you are the kind compassionate person that you claim to be, you will immediately remove that webpage, and any webpage referring my husband, to prevent further damage. You have stated that the purpose of the webpages is to have a conveniently means of replying to your critics.

If you remove these webpages, I assure you the following will immediately happen:

1. The "Fan Club" will disappear, and never return.
2. Mark will respond to your posts on usenet only in a substantive manner, and will no longer address your actions, words and deeds.

You will no longer have a need to have a convenient way of replying to him.

By your action, the war will be over. The future is yours to choose.

Sandra Probert

Dear Mrs. Drew:

I am using email to you since I do not wish to participate in Usenet. I trust that you wil respect this. I wil not email you again, except to forward to you other emails that Rosenthal has sent to me. She had the unmitigated gall to actually post this email to a webpage, which she acknowledges, and has since removed. She had the nerve to post my place of employment in the newsgroups and on that webpage.

Frankly, I am tired of your constant blaming Mark for everything that Rosenthal has done to him. This email was sent to ME, not him, by her. He had warned her several times not to do so, but, she went ahead and emailed me. I have spoken with some of Mark's friends in government law enforcement, and they tell me that this can be construed as stalking behavior, since I have never had contact with her.

Let me be blunt: I have been fully aware of Mark's activities from day one as we share everything in our relationship. He has NEVER posted as Will Ketcher, and we have not had an AOL account for a long time. However, Rosenthal persists in accusing him.

Let me clear up this issue Mark's attempt to infiltrate her email list. He has never denied doing so, and has clearly stated his reasons, which Rosenthal rejects. When he mentioned that our younger son was about to have surgery he began receiving some very nasty email which sounded quite a bit like Rosenthal. I read them, and know that they were hate filled and mirrored her usual verbiage. Some of them actually wished ill to our son. Remember, I am an English teacher and I spend hours a day reading students' work. I also felt that they could have originated with people who were affiliated with her.

Re: Would it be possible to get out of Grade School?

Re: Would it be possible to get out of Grade School?

Mark was deeply offended by some of the statements in these emails, and he attempted to locate the senders, but was unsuccessful. He then decided to try to read her group to see if he could identify the offending individuals. As you know, she found out what he did, and posted a message to that effect. Mark immeidatrely acknowledged what he did, and expressed his reasons, which she denied and said that we never received such email, even though she had absolutely no way of reading his email inbox.

You have been concisntently wrong about Mark, and even more consistently wrong about Mark. I have read many instances where it was clear that you did not udnerstand what he was saying. Now that you do not read his full messages (many times you respond to something that has been severely edited) or his replies, you are making assumptions based on less than all the facts. If you were my student, you would get an F.

When I first received this email I was very upset by her actions, and I wanted to file complaints with Hotmail, RoadRunner and GoDaddy, her website host. Mark talked me out of it, as he does not think that such actions wil lhelp her. In fact, he is convinced that she wil become even more abusive and obsessed with "enemies." You know that I have every right to make such complaints.

Several of my students have used her website about Mark in their wrtiings in my senior honors writing seminar. Another group has used Rosenthal in a debate in my senior debating class. They used her to demonstrate that the First Amendment, which is posted in Mark's study, protects even the most vile people. I gave them an A.

I trust that this helps you get a better perspective on Mark, and on Rosenthal.

As I said above, I will not email you again, but I will forward all of her current messages to me.

If you wish to respond to me, please do so at SandraProb...@xxxxxxxxxxxxx I am using my professional email address simply because that is the address Rosenthal used.
