I heard you were at a marvel editorial confrence this past week it go? Anything exciting happen?

Yes, and many exciting things happened. But then the police were called, four chalk body outlines appeared on the floor of a local pub, restraining orders were filed, denials made, alibis concocted, attorneys hired, cats soothed, and goats offered to Ba'al, a process which began when Mark Millar told an extremely inebriated fan to walk (well, stagger) up to me and ask, "So...um..what do you think of bacon?" in order to determine whether or not I was Jewish. (To which the answer is in the negative.)

Re: ATTNN: JMS Marvel Editorial Conference

Thereupon much hilarity and fisticuffs ensued.

And that is all I plan to say of the situation. The rest is best told in confidence to a grand jury.

But while I'm here...and to change subjects...some folks have asked when my new short story will be appearing in Dark Dimensions. The magazine's website now has info available at:

<http://www.darkwisdom.com/darkwisdom.htm>

Als, to those who have inquired about the B5 scripts website (babylon5scripts.com), which will be going live in October, the reason that folks can log in their email addresses is so that they can be notified not just when the site goes on line, but when each new volume is introduced. Since the plan is to knock ten bucks off each book for the first week or so it's made available, this will help make sure that nobody misses that window.

End of commercial.

I have to go now and bail Mark Millar out of jail.

Well...eventually....

Did someone say BACON!!!!!!<<

Okay, _what_ is with this bacon thing with you already?? My arteries are clogging just reading your posts!

Re: ATTNN: JMS Marvel Editorial Confrence

Bacon is its own reason.

There's always room for Jell-O.
