

Re: Cloth Grocery Bags Redux

Source: <http://newsgroups.derkeiler.com/Archive/Rec/rec.food.cooking/2008-02/msg10923.html>

- From: seopete <peteark07@xxxxxxxxxxxxxxxx>
 - Date: Thu, 28 Feb 2008 23:52:18 -0800 (PST)
-

On Jan 20, 10:12 pm, Blinky the Shark <no.s...@xxxxxxxxxxxx> wrote:

We've discussed how frequently some of us who have clothbagsforget to use them. I've mentioned that I usually have a couple on my passenger seat, and still forget them when I go into the store.

I think I just achieved the Pinnacle Of Stupid for cloth bag behavior.

I only needed a couple-three things. I actually remembered to take a bag with me. Not doing a big shop, I didn't even bother with a cart or basket. I took my couple-three things to the checkout. I checked out.. As I was walking away with my plastic bag of groceries I remembered that I had the cloth bag tucked under my left arm the whole time I shopped -- and checked out.

So, do I win? I'll start working on my acceptance speech...

--

Blinky

Killing all posts from Google Groups

The Usenet Improvement Project:<http://improve-usenet.org>

Blinky:<http://blinkynet.net>

Over the past few years our cloth range has become more and more popular. The amusing thing is I own a company that supplies printed bags and even I forget to take one to the shops.

<http://www.theprintedbagshop.co.uk>

.