Another story from our beloved fuhrer.

So, can you now read the Thai numbers?
The well travelled and high educated pedo Frenchman?

You sound every day more and more boring.
Is this what staying in France do to people?

Of course you know Thai politics by what "a few Thai ladies (whores)" have told you.....

Care to tell the newsgroup how you remain seated, nipping on your beer as a "ba ba boo boo fahrang supremacist" while the restaurant was on fire?

Care to tell the newsgroup your pedo story about how you seduced a choirboy carrying 13 condoms?

BTW, you are posting jewels of anti-Thai propaganda lately in here.
Do you plan to come back to Thailand in the near future?
Wonder if the current government know all this and "lesse majeste" you show in your posts?
Like the one where you were holding a subversive speech in an University

Coup could recur, says Saprang

The possibility of a coup could never be ruled out and another military intervention could happen if the political situation warranted it, General Saprang Kalayanamitr, assistant secretary-general of the Council for National Security, said yesterday.

"Everything happens by the law of cause and effect and for a coup, if there is justifiable cause, then it would take place," Saprang said.

Commenting on the present situation, he drew the analogy of a heating, but not yet boiling, kettle. "It is premature to anticipate a coup as the water has not reached boiling point yet," he said.

Following the promulgation of the 1997 Constitution, many people ruled out the possibility of military intervention ever happening again, but they had been proved wrong, the general said.

The coup would become an extinct political phenomenon only in a true democracy, but Thai politicians still set up phoney political parties for personal gain, he said.

He voiced concern about the political future, saying the country would soon have a new constitution but the same set of corrupt politicians would continue to dominate the landscape.

Sonthi said he was in control of the situation and dismissed concerns of another coup.

It is the nightmare that I fear: gunfights with machine guns in the streets of Bangkok, tanks against other tanks, not against civilians that are quiet with ribbons.

I cannot see today another way to get rid of the senile junta and its muslim dictator. I hope that I'm wrong and that the 'bloodless' coup won't end into a carnage like the previous ones.

Mort
